

Describe a gift that you gave to someone recently

1. What was the gift?
2. Whom did you give it to?
3. When did you give it
4. and explain why you chose this gift.

chose

Max: I personally like to use habit. Anyway, custom is acceptable when you say it is a custom for sb to do sth

Last year, I gave an electric toothbrush to one of my friend as a birthday gift. I choose an electric toothbrush. Maybe you are little confused. I know, in many western countries, people like to see a dentist regularly. That's really a good custom. But almost all of Chinese people don't have this custom. Only when they find there is something wrong with their teeth, they have to go to hospital. So I think electric toothbrush is very helpful. Some survey have shown that electric toothbrush has a stronger clean power than manual one. I want him have a good teeth and healthy body, and he can eat everything he want. After all, eating is the happiest thing in the world.

Max: I gave an electric toothbrush to one of my friends, Jeff, as a birthday gift last month (response to recently - by now we have finished 1, 2 and 3).

Max: I like your way to start your topic directly. Here I think one sentence to describe first 3 question is a little bit short. Last two sentences in para1 makes your story real

I gave an electric toothbrush to one of my friends, Jeff, as a birthday gift last month. Jeff was a little bit surprised because toothbrushes are not cheap in my city. It cost me nearly 200 yuan.

Maybe you are confused about why I chose such an expensive gift. I know, in many western countries, it is a good custom for people to go to see dentist regularly. But almost all of Chinese people don't do it until they have found something wrong with their teeth. Some dentists claim that electric toothbrushes have a stronger clean power than manual ones. So I strongly believe that electric toothbrushes are helpful for preventing tooth decay.

First reason: 1. Chinese people pay less attention to teeth health. 2. power of Electric ones is stronger

Another reason to support your ideas. Three keypoints to help you remember: 1 he loves sweets. 2 I worry about his teeth. 3. no teeth, no food

In addition, Jeff loves sweet food very much, such as New York cheesecakes, chocolates, candy and so on. We call him Sugar Man. I worry about his teeth health. He cannot enjoy the pleasure from food without healthy and strong teeth. So I bought that electric toothbrush as his birthday gift last month.
